

2. What a compiler has to do to translate recursive programming code

What a compiler has to do to translate recursive programming code

- When the recursive call is made, all values/data are put on
- ... the stack
- When the stopping condition/base case is met
- ... the algorithm unwinds
- ... the last sets of values are taken off the stack (in reverse order)